

Planet Pit by Pitbull is an album symbolizing going from nothing to something. It features motifs of escaping the bad times and moving up in the world. Planet Pit highlights the idea of wanting to move up in the world, a view shared by many young people at the time. With its pop groove and occasional Latin feel, Pitbull pushed themes of not worrying about life while you look to move up in life. This makes Planet Pit an album that will go down in history for defining the lower ends of the early and mid-21st century.

With a history of gang life and living in the low points of the 305 area in Miami, Pitbull references heavily on his ability to get out of the gangs going from “Mr. 305” to “Mr. Worldwide”. He continues to push the idea to his listeners that no matter how low you think you are, you can always move up. With lyrics, from his opening single Mr. Worldwide (Intro), such as, “I learned from the best, stayed away from the worst” and “no more food stamps; church”, Pitbull shows how he managed to make his way into a better life, giving hope to those listening. With these lyrics and an upbeat pop style, Pitbull creates an album that captures much of the early 2010s. A time of searching and trying to find your place in the world, Pitbull was able to easily hit the top of the charts during this time. From his relatable lyrics and upbeat songs, Pitbull’s album, Planet Pit, was the essence of the 2010s creating an album that influenced the younger generation of listeners to move up in the world and to keep moving no matter how hard things get.
